CHINA'S COMING MAN.

Prince Chun, Kwangsu's Young Brother, Is Very Progressive.

INTENDS TO VISIT AMERICA.

Stephen Bonsal Has a Talk With the Lad of Eighteen, Who Spoke Feelingly of the United States' Policy. Latter Hopes Day of International Amity Will Come.

You have all heard that the emperor and the empress aunt, as the Germans call Kwangsu's official mother, are absent from Peking and show no signs of returning to the northern capital, despite the coaxing despatches and wheedling words of the allies, says Stephen Bonsal, the New York Herald's special correspondent at Peking, writing under the date of April 17.

For some months I have wanted to know by what euphemism, what sugar coated process, Viceroy Li Hung Chang communicated with his august sovereigns, so as to avoid a suggestion of humiliation, and yesterday his excellency, the viceroy, who knows what curiosity is himself, took me into his confidence. His despatches concerning the peace negotiations bear the inscription, "For the hands and eyes alone of the prince and ministers of the grand secret council table near the throne, now in tour in the provinces."

I have wandered somewhat far afield from Prince Chun, the subject of this article, but I hope you will see the connection later on.

Prince Chun, who seems destined to become the central figure of Chinese history during the next generation, could not have been less known than he was a year ago. Then, as now, he resided in the great ducal palace on the north side of the city in the greatest seclusion. When the Boxer movement began to attract attention, the leaders of this anti-foreign party came by the score to his quiet yamen and endeavored to secure his patronage.

All the promises which were afterward made to Prince Chun and to which he succumbed were made to Prince Chun, but without the desired effect. The boy prince, who is barely 18 years today—listened with infinite patience to all that they had to say, thanked them for their call and begged them to call again, but with nothing to do, because, as he simply said, he knew nothing of public life.

"I am a student," wrote Prince Chun when the Boxer leaders became more pressing. "My ambition is to live in seclusion. I would emulate," he wrote in the words of the great Chinese poet, "the life of the solitary pine tree or the lonely stork."

The Boxers thought the young prince mad and went away, taking with them all his horses and carts, from which it seems only fair to deduce that they and not the allies introduced looting to Peking. During the terrible eight weeks which followed Prince Chun continued to lead in his palace the life of a recluse. After the allies had captured the city and were looting it Prince Chun awaited his fate in the midst of his books in contemplation of a great golden globe, a chair of the heavens which had been his daily companion in his favorite astronomical studies. But the busy fluns paid no attention to such a scene of purely human interest.

That night, when Peking was on fire in many places, when drunken soldiers staggered through the streets right and left and Chinese robbers and brigands came into the city to hold high carnival of crime, the family servants of the prince, much against his will, dressed him as a coolie in rags and led him by secret ways from house to house to one of the lesser gates, outside of which a cart was waiting for him. All through the night he traveled as never a Manchou prince had traveled before, and when the sun rose it found little Prince Chun praying and making the custom-ary prostrations before the great mound in the western hills which contains the remains of his father, the seventh prince.

In what seems to us westerners an incredibly short space of time the Japanese took stock of the district that had fallen to their lot, including the palace of Prince Chun. They immediately placed a guard about the place, and when, with the confidence inspired by the kind treatment they received, the servants told the Japanese in what plight their master was, and where he had taken refuge, General Fukushima sent an officer of high rank and a squadron of cavalry to bring the prince back to his palace, where he assured him he would be under his personal protection. So in a few days Prince Chun was back in his study.

Perhaps it would be as well for me to tell you exactly who Prince Chun is. He is a full brother of the Emperor Kwangsu, consequently a son of the seventh prince. An interview had been arranged for me with him, and after a tedious drive we reached his yamen and finally the entrance to the presence chamber. A few steps beyond the princes, four in number, were awaiting our coming, and the eldest, Prince Chun, closely followed by the others, advanced to meet us.

His imperial highness is slight and about 5 feet 4 inches in height. He has quick, intelligent eyes and is very dignified in his carriage, and these were moments which must have been indeed trying to his dignity. To think of a barbarian standing up right before him! Yet Prince Chun behaved as though he had never been saluted otherwise in his life. He turned and introduced me first to his guest, Prince Shu, an iron capped duke, and then to his younger brothers, Duke Tan and Duke Shun.

Prince Chun then led the way into a room next to his library, which proved to be a recently furnished "foreign salon." He sat beside me at a dining room table where tea was brought, and then followed an avalanche of questions such as I had not bargained for. It was turning the tables upon the interviewer with a vengeance. Prince Chun talked about his great journey to Berlin, cautiously reserved, with the gravity of a man who has already felt the weight of carefully uttered words.

"Yes, it has been arranged with the German minister," he said, "that when the peace negotiations reach a certain stage, which they have not reached yet, I am to start for Germany. When my mission there is completed—and now, the difficulties of the situation having been overcome, he dashed ahead with his words like a boy just out of school—"then I can go anywhere, and I mean to go everywhere. I shall surely visit America. It is so large I am sure it will be like China in many things—the great rivers and the tall mountains, I mean."

"I wish to thank you," began his imperial highness at the close of the conversation, which touched upon numerous questions of travel and of the far countries which he is evidently yearning to see—"I wish to thank you in the name of the throne, myself and the Chinese people for the benevolent attitude which the American government and the American people have observed toward China during the months of trial and uncertainty. We are all animated with the hope of some day reciprocating the generous feelings by which your government has throughout the negotiations been inspired."

"I believe in the future of my land and of my people. At the same time I recognize that it is not well to remain always shut up within the confines of your own home. It is well to see what progress the other nations are making, and I feel confident that had Chinese statesmen known the western world better and the statesmen of the west had been better acquainted with the actual conditions in China much that we both regret might have been avoided. With better knowledge and closer intercourse the time may come yet when all nations shall live together as brothers."

Had it not been for the earnestness with which these words were spoken, had I not known that our interview was (almost incredible to those acquainted with Peking methods) arranged within the day, I could have thought this pleasant speech had been the result of careful schooling. But I have the conviction that it was not. Even if, through the combinations of the predatory powers, we fall in carrying out our policy of honest and fair dealing toward the Chinese it is something to have even in the secluded palace of the Manchou prince it is known that we made the attempt and that if we do fail it will be through no fault of ours, but of the times which are out of joint, especially upon the east coast of Asia.

SILENT MAN OF THE VOLKRAAD.

Rarely Spoke Except In Secret Council and Strongly Opposed Sending of Ultimatum to England—No Lover of Kruger—Touching Incident of His Eldest Son's Death.

General Delarey, the Boer commandant who is making another De Wet of himself in the guerrilla warfare in South Africa, is probably the most modern and up to date of the African fighters, says the Chicago Record-Herald. He is said to be a perfect gentleman in his manners and to be far in advance of his fellow burghers in the matter of dress. He affects none of the negligence of attire so dear to the eye of the real Boers, yet at heart he is as sturdy, as stolid and as pastoral as De Wet or Cronje. Delarey is the officer who engineered the clever capture of the Scots fusiliers. He is now the main pillar of the dwindling Boer army, and unless stopped by a bullet

CASTLE FOR CARNEGIE.

Steel King Will Have a Country Home in Westchester, N. Y.

Andrew Carnegie's most recent undertaking in the United States is the establishment of a country home for himself at Chaucery, in Westchester county, says the New York World. The site which Mr. Carnegie has selected is a beautiful one. There are three high terraces intersected by spacious valleys, and by patches of forest and banked by heavy woodland.

A fine building is now well under way on the easterly side of the center ridge. The site is within a stone's throw of the St. Andrew's golf links to the south, and well known to New Yorkers. The property is on the New York and Putnam railroad, about ten miles from Yonkers, five miles from Tarrytown and eight miles from White Plains. Its western boundary is the historic Sawkill River road now being made a state boulevard. To the north of the property, which is known as Echo Hills, is the station of Ardsley.

A peculiar structure already one-half story high of an odd quality of small granite is under construction. One of the men employed on the work said that the building is to be in the shape of a castle.

"Mr. Carnegie," he continued, "was a constant attendant at the links last year and became acquainted with the country. One day he told Mr. Lee, the superintendent of the golf club, that he was going to build a home here. Shortly afterward he procured this site from the Finnerman Lawrence estate. They say it costs $1,000,000, and how much more he has secured no one knows. This building is to cost $100,000."

THIS GIRL POISON TO BUGS

When a Fly Bites Her, It Immediately Drops Dead.

A young woman in Clyde, N. Y., has the peculiar quality of being poison to insects, says the New York World. The first time she was bitten by a mosquito or other insect bites or stings her it drops dead. The bite leaves only a small red spot without the usual swelling or inflammation.

Doctors say that her condition is due to a peculiar state of the blood caused by having been poisoned at some time by insect bites, acting as an antidote or virus.

The Shamrock and Superstition.

The ill luck of the second Shamrock is all explained now, says the Boston Globe. The peasantry of Connemara declare that the name Shamrock II is of evil augury because, according to an old superstition, to set eyes on a two leaved shamrock is supposed to involve disaster to the person who sees it. It being believed that a witch plucked the third leaf, making the others an omen of evil.

Woodford Will Case Reversed.

The Court of Appeals, on Friday, reversed the decision of the Bourbon Circuit Court in the Woodford will case. A recent decision of the lower court set aside the will which bequeathed about $235,000; the Court of Appeals reverses the judgment and sends it back for a new trial. The whole court sat in the case and the decision was handed down by Chief Justice Paynter. The action was a contest over the will of Thomas Woodford, a bachelor, who died on June 30th, 1897, leaving an estate valued at $300,000. The will was executed only a few months previous to his death, when he was 73 years old.

The contest was made upon the ground that he was not mentally able to make the will, or that it was made under undue influence. In the will he chose as a class his nephews and nieces, and made them equal in the distribution of his estate. Some of these are children of deceased brothers and sisters, and others were children of Lucy Barker and of his brothers Sam and Mat Woodford. The lower court refused to allow the will to be probated. In reversing this judgment the court says:

"We have reached the conclusion that we shall not order the will probated, but that there is sufficient testimony offered by the contestant, and the appellee, to allow the jury to determine whether it had been obtained by undue influence."

Profitable Speculation.

Several weeks since Mrs. P. I. McCarthy, of this city, invested ten dollars in some Texas land bonds. ## A Mean Trick.

Messrs. Archie Bedford, Frank Bedford, Sidney Clay and Sam Clay returned last week from a very successful fishing trip to St. Mary's, O. They report a very pleasant trip and plenty of fish. About the meanest trick ever perpetrated was played on Duane (Duck) Bell, by the above party. He understood that the cat fish is as good as any fish in the waters, and is a great source of sport to fishermen, but is utterly worthless as food, ranking in the same class with the Peter Shiver of our own waters. One day last week Mr. (Duck) Bell received by Adams Express, charges three dollars and twenty cents, a large box of fish from St. Mary's, O. He paid the charges, had the fish sent around home, and then invited about fifty of his friends to a big fish fry that night. Imagine his surprise and disgust when he found every one of the fish to be the festive carp in an advanced stage of decomposition. Between killing time ducks and receiving decomposed fish Mr. Bell has forewarned a sporting life.

It is safe to say that nine-tenths of the people in town to-morrow will go to Hinton's to look at his big stock of furniture.

This will be the means of causing a spirit of good fellowship to prevail throughout the day, and also cause endless amusement.

Disastrous Fire in Lexington.

On Friday afternoon last Lexington was visited by one of the most serious conflagrations in its history. It originated on West Main street and before it could be gotten under control, twenty-three houses had been destroyed, causing a total loss of about $50,000. The Lexington fire department was totally unable to cope with the flames. A News man who witnessed the fire while it was at its fiercest heard at least thirty people exclaim: "Why don't they telegraph to Paris for aid."

The Mayor of Lexington did send a message to Paris asking for assistance, and our department had made all preparations to go up and put out the fire, when a second message was received that the fire was under control. In all of the accounts of the fire printed by the Lexington papers, the Leader was the only one to mention the fact that the Paris department had made preparations to come. In Lexington so jealous of us that she has lost her politeness. While cards of thanks were being printed thanking the Lexington department for their heroic work, etc., a line might have been added thanking Mayor Perry and our boys for their willingness to help them out of a pretty serious dilemma.

JUBILEE DAY.

To-morrow the A. O. U. W.'s Will Own the Town.

A Tremendous Crowd Expected.

Let Every Business Man and Private Citizen Do All In His Power to Make the Day a Big Success.

Proclamation By Mayor Perry.

Weather permitting, there will be the largest crowd in Paris to-morrow ever known in the history of the town. From every quarter comes reports of vast numbers who have expressed their intentions of being present. Richmond, Winchester, Frankfort, Georgetown, Lexington, Cincinnati, Covington, Palmyra, Cincinnati, Mayfield, Carlisle, Louisville, in fact all over the entire State, are going to help us celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of Garth Lodge and do honor to the name of William Garth.

At 4 o'clock to-morrow morning the salute of twenty-five guns will be fired, and from that time on until 4 o'clock the next morning the fun will be fast and furious. At 7:55 Richmond, Winchester and Lexington, and all points between those cities, will arrive. Richmond is coming three hundred strong, both A. O. U. W.'s and B. P. O. E.'s, and will probably own the town before they have been here half an hour. They are a jolly lot of boys, as a representative of The News found out during an hour's stay in that pretty little city last Saturday.

There is one thing about this affair which our merchants should fully appreciate. Our people are too prone to go away from home to buy their goods. The reason of it is that Lexington, Louisville and Cincinnati are doing everything in their power to attract them to those cities. To a certain extent this carnival will obviate this. We want, for that reason, to make it a big success, and more especially the parade feature. We want to make a distinct impression on our visitors that we are a hustling people and cater to their trade. For that reason our enterprising Mayor, Benjamin Perry, yesterday issued the following proclamation:

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION.

PARIS, KY., June 10, 1901.
It is requested that all places of business be closed Wednesday (Carnival Day) between the hours of 10:30 and 12:30 a. m., in order to allow everyone who desires to participate in the A. O. U. W. Parade, thereby insuring its success.
BENJ. PERRY, Mayor.

The balloon ascension in the afternoon will be a big feature. Prof. Bush, who is recognized to be the most fearless in that line in the country, will take up with him a thousand sheets of white paper. On twenty-five of these will be printed advertisements of our leading merchants offering prizes to the finders of the cards. Those who will give prizes are:

G. L. Heyman, an eight dollar parol.

Geo. Lyons, a case of Lion Brewery beer.

Bourbon News, one year's subscription.

Kentuckian-Citizen, one year's subscription.

Democrat, one year's subscription.

Gazette, one year's subscription.

Benj. Perry, one minnow bucket.

Horace Collins, one straw hat.

Winn & Lowry, a pocket knife.

Dow & Spears, a box of cigars.

Ford & Co., a spittoon.

Davis, Thompson & Isgrigg, a pair of child's slippers.

Clarke & Kenney, a box of fancy writing paper.

New Current & Co., one quart of good whiskey.

Jung Brewing Co., one case of beer.

Jno. Lowery, saddle, one buggy duster.

Price & Co., clothers, a pair of suspenders.

W. T. Brooks, pipe.

J. T. Hinton, picture.

January & Connell, Japan Cash Box.

The decorated turnout, for which A. J. Winters & Co., have generously offered a handsome cup as a prize will take place on the public square between the hours of 9:30 and 10 o'clock.

No one should miss the entertainment at the Opera House at night. The advance sale is already very large, and everything points to a packed house to witness a first class show. The Order of Red Men have purchased two of the down stairs boxes, and will attend in full Indian costume. It is earnestly requested that every house in town be decorated. Remember you will be doing yourself a service by doing this. The A. O. U. W. Lodge has seen to it that a crowd of enormous proportions will be here. It now rests with the people to make a good impression upon them, and it cannot be done in a better way than by decorating.

BIRTHS.

To the wife of T. E. Moore, Jr., on Monday morning, a daughter.

ALL members of Bourbon Lodge, I. O. O. F., No. 23, are requested to meet at lodge room at 10:15 a. m. to take part in parade of Garth Lodge No. 43.

A. O. U. W. E. D. PATON, N. G. ROY CLENDENIN, Sec'y.

You Do, or You Don't Need Glasses

The eye being a rather delicate organ, great care should be exercised in the selection of proper glasses. Many believe that glasses should be restored to only when the sight becomes so defective as not to be able to do without. This is a great mistake which must be combated. Whenever there is unmistakable evidence of the need of their aid, they should be used. A neglect of this rule sometimes produces mischief which results in serious trouble if the course be persisted in. Our Dr. C. H. BOWEN having just returned from taking a special course in Optics from one of the best specialists in New York, is prepared to do the best of work, having the latest improved methods of fitting. Examinations free. Next visit Thursday, June 13, 1901.

STORIES OF LINCOLN.

THE TINY SOLDIER WHO ASSISTED AT THE PUBLIC LEVEE.

Old Abe's Narrative About How the Flat Bottomed Boat Went Aground and How She Got Safely Back Into the Ohio River.

On one occasion a little drummer boy, securing leave of absence, accompanied a sergeant to a public levee that "Old Abe" was holding at the White House. They went early, and when President Lincoln appeared and the handshaking began they were not long in reaching him.

The tall man, almost a giant in physical proportions, looked down with an amused smile at the tiny drummer boy, who appeared hardly 10 years of age. Grasping the little fellow's right hand, the president suddenly reached out his left, swung the boy off his feet and set him gently down on a small table beside him.

"Aha, my little soldier," he said, laughing, "you shall help 'Uncle Abe' review this line today, and I'll prolong your leave of absence!"

Lincoln asked the boy his age, place of residence, regiment and where he was on duty. These were none of the more important officers of the army or navy, members of congress or of the executive departments chanced to pass in the line, the president would gravely introduce his young assistant, with whom they were required to shake hands as well as with himself.

When the reception was over, President Lincoln took the boy into his private apartments and introduced him to Mrs. Lincoln. After entertaining him at luncheon he dismissed him with a brief note to the commanding officer of the hospital where he was then stationed telling why the boy's leave of absence had been extended.

Lincoln's geniality and willingness at all times to hear or to tell a good story were conspicuous traits, not always agreeable to some of his able but worried and irritable advisers.

On one occasion a sergeant had a squad of men at work unloading supplies from an Ohio river steambot that in some mysterious manner had made its way from the interior to the coast waters of Virginia. It was a flat bottomed boat, drawing not more than three feet of water when loaded and hardly dampening its plank bottom when light. It was propelled by a horizontal stern wheel, driven by a small upright engine. Details of the type were common on the Ohio, which runs almost dry at some seasons. They were known as "Pittsburgers" and were fabled to navigate freely in a heavy dew.

The sergeant's men were hard at work carrying these ashore from the craft when suddenly they stopped and sent up a lusty cheer. A little tuglike steamer had pulled up alongside, and from it stepped a tall, awkward man dressed in rusty black and wearing a napless silk hat. The sergeant recognized the president and saluted.

"Your boat is well named, sergeant," said the latter gravely.

The soldier was puzzled. He did not know that the steamer had a name and said so.

The president took him by the arm and led him back on the tug. There the stern of the "Pittsburger" loomed above them, and on its dirty white surface in tarnished gilt letters a yard long appeared the single word, Mist.

"Yes," said Lincoln, "it's very well named indeed, sergeant. All those boats need a mist, and they'll run anywhere."

"Years ago," he continued, "I was attending court in Cairo, Ills. when the Ohio was so low that all the water there was between its banks and the levee. I had a party of friends with me who had spilled over from the Mississippi. Those 'Pittsburgers' were passing and repassing all the time. One night there came up a little shower that raised the level maybe a half inch. One of 'em got out of the channel, slid ashore and grounded in the mud right beside the courthouse."

"It was there the next morning," and I remarked to a brother attorney that that boat was aground to stay. He was from 'Egypt' and knew more about 'Pittsburgers' than I did. He merely smiled and said, 'You wait and see.'"

"There came on another shower that afternoon. I heard an engine puffing and looked out of the courthouse window. Maybe you'll think I'm exaggerating, but there was that boat steaming down the road toward the river, and in two minutes she was back in the Ohio, just as the shower was over."

"I expressed my surprise to the judge, but he said that was nothing. If the shower hadn't come up in time, the captain would simply have hired a boy with a sprinkling pot to go ahead. They're great boats, sergeant. Likely as not this one got here by coming across country."

President Lincoln repeated this extravagant story without the ghost of a smile. During its recital Secretary Stanton and General Halleck and Sherman—the last named having run up the day before from his march through the Carolinas—who were with the party, had approached the president. General Sherman smiled broadly, but Stanton looked sober. The president caught his glance and, with a wink at the others, said, "But maybe you've heard this before, Stanton."

"Very likely I have," the secretary grimly responded, "but I would suggest, Mr. President, that General Grant is awaiting us."

The gleam of amusement left the kindly man's eyes. He gravely turned and shook hands with the sergeant and then strode after his companions as they made their way ashore.—Roe L. Hendrick in Youth's Companion.

STANDARD TIME.

To Ascertain and Promulgate It in a Costly Task.

"What time is it?" Few questions are more common than this, and yet each day the United States government goes to a great expense in giving it an official answer. To ascertain the instant when it is noon on the seventy-fifth meridian and to send that information all over the country is a great and a costly task. The astronomical observatory in Washington computes the true time, which is thence transmitted by electricity to every important city and town.

About five minutes before the Washington noon the telegraph companies cut off all their regular business except on lines where they have more than one wire. They then connect all important points, from which there may be numerous ramifications, with an electric wire going into the great clock in the observatory so that all over the country its tickings may be heard. For the ten seconds just before 12 o'clock the telegraph is broken by the "noon beat." Regular business is then resumed.

In some cities the wires connect with a time ball which drops with the noon beat. The time ball in Washington over the state, war and navy department building is three feet in diameter and can be seen from all parts of the city. Crowds frequently gather about to see it fall, a distance of 21 feet, high in the air. The man whom some of the spectators suppose to be dropping the ball is merely there to hoist it again to its place.

In the building beneath are 23 clocks which are each day automatically corrected by it. An electrical device "sets" them, placing hour, minute and second hands exactly vertical at the instant the ball drops. The hands that are too fast are pushed back, and those that are slow are thrust forward.

Although Washington is on the seventy-seventh meridian, the noon hour is for convenience computed for the seventy-fifth, the time standard for the eastern part of the United States. In the central belt, which is governed by the nineteenth meridian, the signal from Washington means 11 o'clock, in the Rocky mountain belt it is 10 o'clock, and on the Pacific coast line it is 9 o'clock.

FEASTED ON SPARROWS.

A Diet That Did Not Agree With the Crane.

"Some time ago I had occasion to observe an interesting change in the habits and temperament of a crane which had been picked up in the swamps of Arkansas," said a gentleman from one of the towns on the Mississippi river, and the change was startling. The crane was placed in a small park which was literally filled with English sparrows. These pests did not like the visitor from the lowlands, and they made daily assaults on the poor bird. The crane was a pretty fowl, long, slender, pure white and with the stately stride of a tragedian. The sparrows would systematically swoop down on the crane in droves, and the attacks were fierce and vicious.

The crane stood the assaults with indifference for awhile, but finally the fowl from the swamp figured out a method of retaliation, and it was effective. In some way the crane learned that sparrow was a pretty sweet morsel. From the time she learned it she feasted on sparrows. She would slip up cautiously on these pesky critters and throw her yellow beak out like a gig. She never missed the mark. She always landed a sparrow, and a singular part of the thing is that she would swallow them whole, feathers and all. But the crane would always dampen the blood in the bird in one of her water basins of the park.

"The diet evidently did not agree with the crane, and she became a trifle droopy and showed signs of indigestion. She finally died, and the keeper of the park believes that the crane's death was caused by a severe case of indigestion brought on by eating sparrows."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

WILL NOT KISS THEIR WIVES

Thirteen Married Men of Mount Hope, Kan., Form an Organization.

Thirteen men of Mount Hope, a small town near Wichita, Kan., are adherents of the belief that men should not kiss women, says the Chicago Record-Herald. All of the 13 are married, and they have just formed a club known as the Mount Hope Married Men's Anti-Kissing Club.

All the members are quite prominent in business circles of that place, and the organization of the club was kept under cover for three weeks, but its secret finally leaked out. In a statement to reporters President Wilson said:

"All this talk about our wives going to sue us for divorce because we have pledged not to kiss them is not of the worst kind. We went into this with the understanding that it was to be carried out as an experiment, and we will stick to it if the women uphold us in it. Of course, every member has taken a pledge not to kiss his wife for one year, but there is a proviso that if we all get tired of the proposition we can disorganize the club and no one will have broken a pledge."

"I have been into it now three weeks and am perfectly satisfied with the arrangement, as is my wife. I find that kissing is a filthy habit, and that a man can love a great deal more strongly."

A society that our Dr. Day's character was his tenderness and thought for children. I never knew him to pass a little newboy on the street without buying a paper, and he always took the paper with a look in his eyes as much as to say, "We must help the boys to get a living." It was a beautiful trait—not giving as charity, but buying what the boy had to sell.—Mrs. Gilbert in Scribner's Magazine.

Scrofula

THE OFFSPRING OF HEREDITARY BLOOD TAIN.

Scrofula is but a modified form of Blood Poison and Consumption. The parent who is tainted by either will see in the child the same disease manifesting itself in the form of swollen glands of the neck and throat, catarrh, weak eyes, offensive sores, and abscesses and ofentimes white swelling—sure signs of Scrofula. There may be no external signs for a long time, for the disease develops slowly in some cases, but the poison is in the blood and will break out at the earliest opportunity. S. S. S. cures this wasting, destructive disease by first purifying and building up the blood and stimulating and invigorating the whole system.

J. M. Scott, 151 Public Square, Nashville, Tenn., says: "Ten years ago my daughter fell and cut her head. From this wound, on the side of her face became swollen and burst. Some of the best doctors here and elsewhere attended her without any benefit. We decided to try S. S. S., and a few bottles cured her entirely."

S. S. S. makes new and pure blood to nourish and strengthen the body, and is a positive and safe cure for Scrofula. It overcomes all forms of blood poison, whether inherited or acquired, and no remedy so thoroughly and effectively cleanses the blood. If you have any blood trouble, or your child has inherited some blood taint, take S. S. S. and get the blood in good condition and prevent the disease doing further damage.

Send for our free book and write our physicians about your case. We make no charge whatever for medicine.

I want to recommend it to every family and advise them to keep DeWitt's Salve on hand, as it is a sure remedy for scalds or any sores."—Clarke & Kenney.

Dyspepsia cannot be long lived because to live requires nourishment. Food is not nourishing until it is digested. A disordered stomach cannot digest food, it must have assistance. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does all kinds of food without aid from the stomach, allowing it to rest and retain its natural functions. Its elements are exactly the same as the natural digestive fluids and it simply can't help but do you good.—W. T. Brooks.

Going to the Pan American Exposition?

If so, you want to go comfortably, and see something and learn something going and coming. To do this, it will be best to have your ticket routed from Cincinnati over the C. H. & D. Railway, going via Detroit through Canada, seeing English wares and customs, and seeing Niagara Falls en route, and, if you like the water, come back via the Great Lakes. Your railway ticket via this line gives you the privilege of changing your train, and coming back via the Lake Erie steamer to Toledo, or Detroit, if you desire to do so, without extra cost.
